

- What do I want to learn or understand better?

I would like to understand how to make better user stories and tasks, since we noticed there is some confusion sometimes when working on user stories you did not write yourself. So I would like to work on that.

- How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

I feel like we still miss some points in the scrum workflow, like making correct tasks. So I would like to emphasise better tasks and user stories, but it is hard when trying to make effective and fast meetings.

- What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

This week we became a bit better at timeboxing, or just general efficiency in the meetings, but I feel like we still need to work on it. Although I suppose we are having a good time so maybe in a way it is more teambuilding if we are a bit less effective and talk about other stuff sometimes. But anyway I think my contribution, like last week, was in effectiveness and making user stories and not letting the meetings go too much in the wrong direction. The effort estimations also work better now, and we feel like they are good estimations.

- What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

This week I continued on my pdf journey and added the second page required in the pdf and made it resemble the original one with sample data. I worked with another user story group who handled the input which later would end up in the pdfs second page. This went great and all, but I realised we should have communicated a bit more on the connection between our user stories since we need to add a bit more for them to be complete, which we now need to do next week.
