

- What do I want to learn or understand better?

As the last sprint of the project, I ended up mostly wanting to learn about creating better user stories, just like last time. It felt like the last sprint was more of a "put in the finishing touches" mixed with some value for the customer. So it was a good sprint, but I feel like we didn't improve significantly from the last one. But I do feel like we improved on the whole by a lot, from the first to the last sprint.

- How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

I feel mostly like last sprint because this sprint was a little bit different, like I said in the first question. So I still feel like I would like to help the team with perfecting the user stories.

- What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

This week felt like more of a "deliveries week", as stated before, in the sense that most focus was on making the product whole. So I felt like we lacked a bit of scrum improvement from last week. But the rebasing idea that JP suggested was something I helped a couple of team-members with, and did more of myself.

- What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

This week I solved a couple of smaller bugs, making the product whole. I also worked on some refactoring and documentation. So it was a good week.
