

- What do I want to learn or understand better?

Currently we have decided on a project idea and have in that process learnt to work together better, which I think is great and something to continue to work on. How the team works with scrum moving forward is something I would like to learn, and how this changes the group dynamic. Also, just like last week, I would like to understand the scrum workflow better, which I think is something you learn by doing it, so that is the plan.

- How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

This week I noticed that all of us in the group couldn't attend every lecture, which obviously always could happen. So I think updating those who couldn't attend the lecture of its content is a good idea to help them learn, if the content seems share worthy of course.

- What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

Just like last week we have not started the scrum workflow, but we have started to think about it and share some thoughts about how to do it effectively. We have also as stated before gotten to know each other better, which is going to help in the scrum process. I think realising the importance of the group dynamic and using it effectively is the best contribution of mine this week.

- What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

Defining the project scope and important questions to ask our product owner about the specifics of the project is something I have contributed with. As the weeks go by I would probably prefer this to continue to be the case, and not lose the main reason for the project and its value.
